

BROUGHT TO TRIAL.

"Liverpool Jack" Must Answer for His Wholesale Kidnapping.

District-Attorney Bedford Selecting a Jury to Try Him.

The Prisoner and Many of His Progress Victims in Court.

A human spider, who wove a gigantic web in which he entangled a number of poor, foolish human flies, was brought to the bar of justice, before Judge Cowing, in Part II. of the Court of General Sessions this morning.

His name is pretty well known to New Yorkers.

Few indeed who read the newspapers have not heard of John Fitzpatrick, alias Liverpool Jack, the Greenwich street man-catcher.

His name is so widely known indeed that the big court-room was crowded this morning when the Judge briskly entered and took his seat on the bench.

At the same moment the man-catcher lumbered in through another door.

He is big and strong and brutal looking.

His heavy face is fiery red and an aggressive-looking little patch of white whiskers grows straight out on his chin. His hair is black and tinged with gray.

He was well dressed, but evidently laboring under great excitement.

His sleek, well-fed appearance was in strong contrast with the few of the many prematurely broken-down men who returned to testify against him—men whom he has sent, by false representations, and in many instances against their will, to Progress Yucatan, there to work on railroads until, overtaken by fever, broken down by the fever, hot climate, they dropped by the roadside or, in the vermin-infested huts provided for them to live in, not until they were dead.

Not until the world heard of his business, but since then his path has not been one of roses, and today he sits before a just judge, with Howe and Hummel beside him.

They have undertaken the herculean task of freeing him from the toils.

Ex-Judge Canning S. Bedford, of the District-Attorney's office, is prosecuting the case, and he began the work of getting a jury.

Mr. Bedford told each candidate for jury duty that the prisoner was on trial accused of kidnapping one David Kennedy on the 24th of May last and sending him down to Yucatan.

Kennedy is only one of sixteen flies who have similar complaints against the spider.

They were brought back from Progress by a World reporter and aided the paper in breaking the spider's web.

After the spider entrapped 149 foolish flies and sent them down to a fate worse than death.

"Liverpool Jack" is the name by which Fitzpatrick has been known on South street and at Castle Garden for the last ten or fifteen years.

His so-called boarding-house, on Greenwich street, called Little Castle Garden, was long ago condemned as a trap for newly arrived immigrants.

Many complaints have been made by new arrivals that they were beguiled into Fitzpatrick's place, that their baggage was got from them, and that exorbitant charges for "storage" were extorted from them before they could regain it.

Last year he was arrested for detaining an immigrant's baggage and spent several days in the Tombs, finally getting out, however.

At another time he was in trouble for wounding John Hahn, a Castle Garden runner, by hitting him with a butcher's cleaver, but the matter was settled out of court.

On June 3 the steamer Mount Edgcombe arrived from Havana with two stowaways named David Kennedy and Henry Locke on board.

They went to the steamer with a remarkable story of wrong at Fitzpatrick's hands.

They and a score of others had arrived from England recently, and while in the ship saw a blackboard outside of Liverpool Jack's place inviting men to work on a railroad in Yucatan. They were enticed at a moment's notice and their board from the time of leaving New York.

They accepted these terms and arrived at Progress May 17.

Instead of $35 a month and board, they got barely enough money to pay their board alone, and the food they got was almost unfit to eat.

Friends of John Hahn, another man who had been sent forward with a story of Hahn being horribly ill-treated and half-starved and finally dragged and carried on board ship, went to see him and also found that sixteen other unfortunate men who accepted Fitzpatrick's offer were in Yucatan, starving, almost naked, and in need of work, and all without means of communicating with their friends.

The District-Attorney took prompt action on hearing these facts, and Fitzpatrick's arraignment in court today is the result.

It was 1:30 o'clock before the jury was finally selected.

The case was adjourned until to-morrow.

HERNAN NOT OUT OF DANGER.

JUDGE BARRETT REFUSES TO RELEASE BARKER ON BAIL.

Ex-Alderman Barker, Tammany leader in the Thirtieth Assembly District, who is accused of brutally assaulting James Hernan, County Democrat, is clearly very ill at ease concerning the outcome of the trial.

Hernan lies at the residence of Jim McQuade, 344 West Twenty-sixth street, in a very serious condition. His jaw is broken and he is suffering intense pain resulting from his right, and no physician can be found who will attend to the man who will recover.

His abdomen is terribly swollen, and it is feared that an operation will have to be performed.

Barker was brought to Jefferson Market Police Court this morning. He was accompanied by Police Captain Grant. He was not compelled to sit with the other prisoners, but was given the courtesy of being allowed the privilege of the private room.

His counsel, Joseph Stiner, announced that he had written of habeas corpus and certiorari, directing that the prisoner be taken to the Justice Barret in the Supreme Court Chamber at 10:30 o'clock.

Barker's friends got Prof. H. P. Loomis to make an examination of the injured man yesterday, but before the Professor had proceeded very far Hernan was taken away by a nurse. Stone refused to allow any further interference.

The Professor said that Hernan was in no immediate danger of death, but refused to give a certificate to that effect.

Judge Barrett said that he had no authority to act in the matter, and refused to accept bail.

GIBLIN'S FIGHT FOR LIFE.

WITNESSES TELL OF THE FATAL STRUGGLE IN GOELZ'S BAKERY.

The inquiry ordered by Gov. Felt into the circumstances of the killing of Maximilian Goelz in February, 1889, by Charles Giblin was resumed this morning in the Common Pleas Court before Judge Bourne.

Valentine Goelz, husband of the murdered woman, was present for the first time at the inquiry.

State Atty. Gen. Deputy Warden of the Tombs prison, said that Giblin has been found guilty while in the Tombs.

Charles Goelz, owner of the building at 102 West Houston street, where the murder was committed, testified that Valentine Goelz was very quiet.

Lawyer McClelland told of his connection with Giblin's case, and said the trial was conducted too hurriedly.

Rose Crockett, of 31 South Washington street, said she passed Goelz's bakery at the time of the murder and saw Giblin struggling to get up while others were beating him.

Courtney's Conqueror Wants to Be a Cop. Harrison R. Armstrong, of Saginaw, Mich., who defeated Courtney in a three-mile shell race on Seneca Lake a few weeks ago, applied at Police Headquarters this morning for an appointment as a cop.

The boats were only slightly damaged.
